Comments Stream in on Missouri's Transportation Needs Comment Period Ends Today

July 3, 2014

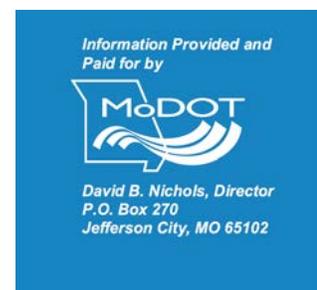

Dear «GreetingLine»

Wow! This has been a tremendous past few weeks for transportation in Missouri. We placed before Missourians a draft list of transportation projects and asked for their thoughts. And the Show-Me State sure lived up to its name. We logged more than 1,100 comments and expect more before the official public comment period ends at 5 p.m. today.

I'm encouraged so many Missourians are interested in their transportation system, and I'm excited to see the final list at our July 9 meeting in Jefferson City. We'll have the final regional lists posted online by that afternoon at: www.modot.org/movingforward.

It seems fitting that our comment period should end as millions of Americans take to our highways, bike/ped paths, transit, rail and airports to celebrate the very independence that makes possible the open, respectful and civil dialogue we have enjoyed these last weeks. My sincere thanks to everyone who has participated. It makes me proud to be an American and a Missourian.

Happy Fourth of July and Safe Travels,

Stephen R. Miller
Chairman
