- Design-Build projects WILL BE counted this year and Prime Contractors WILL NEED to submit the Prime Project Workbook with data
- Professional Services projects WILL NOT be counted this year and Prime Consultants DO NOT need to submit the Prime Project Workbook

Primes Will Receive

Prime Contractors will receive an email from me which will contain the following:

- Updated written instructions
- Link to this recorded Lunch & Learn webinar
- Active Project List
- Prime Project Workbook
- Subcontractor 1391 form

Prime contractors are asked to forward my email with all the attachments, to only those subcontractors (DBE and non-DBE) who performed work on the project the latest week in July.

How the New Process Works

Once the Prime Contractors receive my email with the attachments and links, they will need to forward my email to the subcontractors (DBE and non-DBE) who performed work the latest week in July.

- Primes will need to look at the Active Project List and save the Prime Project Workbook one time for each project on the list in which you are the prime. (Example: 250701-D01 – Z Construction)
- Primes will need to change the tab named “Prime” to their company name.
- Primes will need to change each of the Sub tabs to the subcontractor company name, so that each subcontractor who worked on the project during the latest week in July, has their own tab.

- The subcontractors will complete the Subcontractor 1391 form and email it to the prime contractor. DO NOT convert to PDF
  - Only 1 Subcontractor 1391 form will be completed per subcontractor per project

- Once the Prime Contractor receives all the Subcontractor 1391 forms
  - The prime will copy the subcontractor's name, city, state, contract number, and project location at the top of the form, as well as all the data entered by the subcontractor and paste it into the tab with the subcontractor's name within the Prime Project Workbook for that project
  - Highlight from cell A1 to X1, then down to X27, right click, select copy, and paste into the Prime Project Workbook
